

HANDI-MIL – Young people with disabilities in the ‘missions locales’ – Connection with the public sector

Project summary:

The ‘missions locales’ were created in May 1982. Their aims are to support young people from 16 to 25 years old to help them into getting sustainable employment. This means that they have to facilitate the professional inclusion of young people but also to work on all the factors of this inclusion such as health. Among the public concerned by the ‘missions locales’, the young people with disabilities seem to be particular users. We therefore hope to learn more about their background, to study the specific forms of support to which they are subjected to and also, to identify the jobs to which they are directed to and the place of public service in these jobs. This project will rely on a group of seven students of the Master “Youth: Policies and Care”.
